CAPE D'OR SALMON

Cape D'or is a beautiful salmon that is raised on land in Nova Scotia. Unlike other closed circuit recirculating water farms in North America, Cape D'or is the only farm that uses biosecure saltwater wells. This gives the salmon a flavor that is closer to that of a wild salmon. Canaqua, the company that grows these salmon, is currently going through the organic certification process and is expected to be fully organic by the end of this year.

The company has a farm close to the Bay of Fundy. The facility works on a closed-containment system that recycles all saltwater in the salmon tanks, while waste is drawn out and used as fertilizer.

The salmon are fed organic fish food, and since the farm carefully controls any contaminants that enter the tanks, it is not necessary to give the fish antibiotics.
